

Copyright Agreement

Author's Full Name (Authors' Full Names)

Institutional Affiliation

Address

Email

Title of the article submitted to AIIGB

The author hereby declares under their own responsibility and guarantees that:

- The submitted article is original and has not been previously published (either in entirety or in part, including translations);
- The article has been fully authored by the indicated author(s), is neither plagiarized nor self-plagiarized (in whole or in part), and was not generated using artificial intelligence tools;
- The article does not contain defamatory statements or assertions, and does not violate the personal or property rights of any individual or institution.

The author must secure formal consent to reproduce any auxiliary materials used in the study (maps, tables, photos, etc.) and must provide the journal's editorial office with documentation or electronic correspondence verifying the right to use these materials.

If the manuscript has been co-authored, all authors must be aware of the contents of this copyright and publication agreement and must sign it.

The author is solely responsible for any legal actions that may arise from copyright infringements or breaches of the declarations made in this agreement. The author agrees to indemnify the editors against any costs, expenses, or damages, including reasonable attorney fees, incurred or imposed on the editors as a result of the violation of the conditions outlined in this agreement.

The author grants the Yearbook of the "George Barițiu" Institute of History:

- The exclusive right of first publication of the article and its distribution in the published form (both printed and digital), along with any other materials (tables, graphs, illustrations, etc.) that are part of the published article, either on the journal's website or in databases;
- The right to make corrections or edits to the language of the article or related materials without altering the original meaning.

The Yearbook of the "George Barițiu" Institute of History grants authors the following non-exclusive rights:

- The right to have the article published free of charge in the pages of the Yearbook;
- The right to use the article for teaching purposes, including making multiple copies for individual distribution or inclusion in printed course materials;

- The right to publish the article in digital form, in whole or in part, under the Creative Commons CC BY-NC-ND license, on open-access platforms, including personal pages, institutional websites, or digital archives.

The author agrees that in the event of republication of the article, the Yearbook of the "George Barițiu" Institute of History will be cited as the original source of publication, together with the full bibliographic details (author, article title, publication name, volume number, page numbers, DOI, etc.) necessary for proper identification.

Author

On behalf of the Yearbook of the "George Barițiu" Institute of History
Scientific Secretary of the Editorial Board,
Iosif-Marin BALOG